

71.6m Ice Class Expedition Passenger Vessel

DATE LAUNCHED:	1982
LENGTH:	71.6m (234ft)
BEAM:	12.8m (41ft 11in)
LOCATION:	Northern Europe

General Description

The Vessel is one of the most popular style of vessels currently used in Antarctica and the Arctic. Originally built as an ice-strengthened research vessel in Finland in 1982, she was refurbished in 2000 and converted into a passenger ship for expeditions to the polar regions. The vessel's excellent reputation for polar expedition cruising is due to her strength, maneuverability and size. She is small and nimble, which means she can sail up close to landing sites and venture where other, larger ships can't. Carrying just 54 passengers, she allows a far more personal and intimate experience of the destinations visited.
